

Many Adults, Particularly Young Adults, Are Forgoing Rideshare Services Like Uber and Lyft

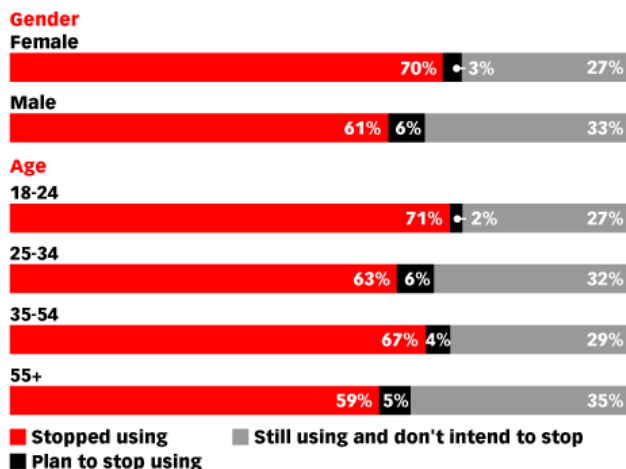

ARTICLE |

Rimma Kats

Fewer people in the US are using rideshare services during the pandemic. According to July 2020 data from CivicScience, 71% of respondents ages 18 to 24 said they have stopped using rideshare services. Of those 55 and older, just 59% said the same, while over a third of the same cohort reported they are still using rideshare services and don't intend to stop.

US Adults' Rideshare Use During the Coronavirus Pandemic, by Demographic, July 2020

% of respondents in each group

Note: numbers may not add up to 100% due to rounding
Source: CivicScience as cited on company blog, July 6, 2020

256719

www.eMarketer.com

Earlier in May, Lyft reported that rides on its service fell by 70% in Q1 and were still down by 75% in the second week of April on a year-over-year basis.

Read More:

- COVID-19 Has Ground Tourism to a Halt. Now What?
- Lyft Will Take User Share from Uber Through 2023
- US, UK Travel Sales Won't Recover Until 2022

eMarketer and Business Insider Intelligence have joined forces to become the leading research company focused on digital transformation. For more insights and key statistics on the biggest trends in today's most disruptive industries, subscribe to Chart of the Day.