

Six in 10 US Employees Prefer Working from Home amid Pandemic

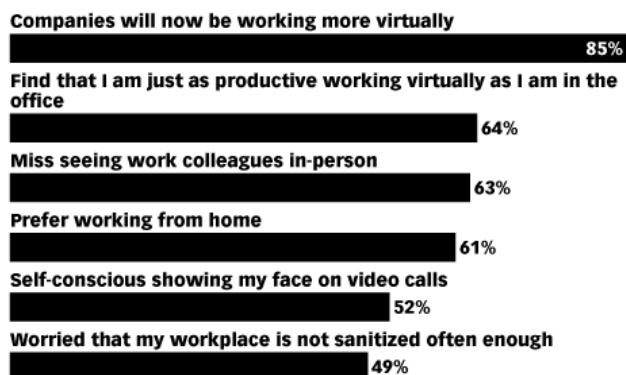

ARTICLE |

Alicia Phaneuf

Amid the rising number of coronavirus cases in the US, many companies are continuing to allow their employees to work remotely. Among US employees who are currently working and/or working from home, nearly nine in 10 believe that companies will now be working more virtually, according to June research from Provoke Insights.

Attitudes of US Employees Toward Working from Home, June 2020

% of respondents

Note: top 2 responses of respondents who work/work from home and strongly agree/agree
Source: Provoke Insights, "B2B: Do Employees Plan to Work From Home Forever?" July 6, 2020

256910

www.eMarketer.com

And although 63% of respondents said that they miss seeing their colleagues in-person, 64% said that they are just as productive working virtually, and 61% said they prefer working from home.

Read More

New Oculus features will help Facebook deepen VR's social capabilities

Spotify officially rolls out video podcasts

Microsoft's new Teams features will deepen integrations across its broader enterprise ecosystem

eMarketer and Business Insider Intelligence have joined forces to become the leading research company focused on digital transformation. For more insights and key statistics on the biggest trends in today's most disruptive industries, subscribe to Chart of the Day.